

The CMRA keeps the most recent three years of tax returns (IRS Form 990) the most recent annual financial reports posted on the Forum for your review at any time.

CMRA members in good standing may also inspect other business records, when the member presents a written request stating the purpose of the request, and when the requested materials are relevant to the stated purpose. This type of material includes the corporate minute book and other business records, but it does not include confidential information, such as protected health and/or employee records, election ballots, board discussions, and attorney-client communications. CMRA maintains a records retention policy and cannot make records available if they have been destroyed pursuant to that policy, nor will it provide records to a member for business transactions that precede the individual's current membership tenure.

Inspections can be made at our principal office with a pre-arranged appointment. For the time being, CMRA policy is that a CMRA director will be present at each inspection. The director should be able to answer any questions you may have about CMRA records, or be able to direct you to someone who could answer your questions. In the future, we may change the requirement that a CMRA director be present at the inspection. We are eager to do our best to answer any questions you may have.

We will charge a reasonable fee for making copies of any record. Copies may not be shared with any other individual without the consent of CMRA. Further, anyone who inspects our records may be asked to sign a non-disclosure and confidentiality agreement in order to protect confidential information and/or to prevent information from being used to damage our vendor relationships or give undue advantage to our competitors.

As you know, our office has moved to Waco. Our office hours are 9-4:30, Monday to Friday. Our new address is:
